From the President: Peggy Maslow National Wildlife Refuges

My birder friend from North Carolina, Karen Hogan, recently introduced me to the US Fish and Wildlife Service website, www.fws.gov . Go to this website and click on the National Wildlife Refuges link and you can see a national map of refuges. Click on any refuge and you get much more information. Hogan says she lives on this website and it keeps improving.

I know NSAS members lead bird walks on the NWR that includes Stehli Beach and the nearby marshes, so I read about that refuge on this website, which I learned is part of the Oyster Bay NWR. Also included are lists of birds such as the many waterfowl during the colder months. The NY State map shows seven NWR on Long Island and three more in the rest of the state. This was all news to me. Teddy Roosevelt in 1903 established the first NWR to protect migratory birds on Pelican Island, Florida. Since then the number of refuges has grown to 562. Karen Hogan has been to 110 NWR since 2011, which is when she started birding. She and her sister intend to travel to the 460 NWR that people are permitted to visit. On Long Island, the Lido Beach Refuge requires a special permit to visit, andis not open to the public.

I also recommend looking at Karen Hogan's website, www.birdingwithkarenandteresa. com, which describes each refuge she has visited, almost always with her sister, Teresa. They take photos and list the birds and Hogan also describes the trail system and plants and other animals besides birds. All her bird information is also on her ebird lists, which you can view at ebird.org. So if you are thinking of birding a NWR or looking for particular birds, check both websites. When the sisters plan a visit, Hogan often contacts the visitor's center to ask questions about where to go, especially if the refuge is very large. She says the staff and volunteers are wonderful people and very helpful without exception. She also checks ebird lists from that area.

On Karen and Teresa's website is a link to the NWR newsletter and Birding Wire newsletter from June 4, 2014 with an article by Susan Morse, a writer-editor in the Refuge System Branch of Communications, about Karen and Teresa after they had visited over 50 NWR. Here is a quote from that article, "At Pocosin Lakes Refuge, NC, Hogan filmed snow geese in flight. 'I can't imagine anyone seeing these amazing birds and not wanting to preserve them for future generations,' she says, her voice breathless with emotion."

Hogan, a scientist with a microbiology degree, hopes that by documenting all 460 NWR she can convince people of their value. She said that NWR, originally created to help wildlife thrive, are vital to wildlife's existence in the US. So dedicated are the sisters that they spend every daylight hour when they visit a NWR, documenting what they experience. They arrive at dawn and leave at dusk, carrying food with them for quick meals. They have already spent $24,000 of their own money since 2011 and they need to still visit 350 more NWR. Money has become tight for them so they have to scale back the number of visits this year. Their website will grow slowly but they are determined to finish their mission.

Hogan feels that NWR are a wonderful gift to all Americans for which we should be grateful. She described to me her reaction after her first birding experience, which was at a North Carolina NWR, "This is amazing. This is federal land and we own it. It's ours." She added, "My first love is National Wildlife Refuges."

From the sisters' website here is a sample of Hogan's description of her visit to Sacramento NWR on Dec. 22, 2014: "Driving less than 1 mile an hour with many stops and spending a great deal of time at each designated viewing area the 6 mile auto tour took us 7 hours to complete. Attempting to count the ducks and geese for our ebird list was overwhelming. There were huge flocks of Geese including Snow, Ross's and Greater White Fronted in the water and they were constantly lifting from the water, flying overhead only to land again. It was a spectacular sight and the sign on the refuge entrance was correct; 250000 geese and 500000 ducks were definitely visiting the Sacramento NWR Complex. We saw Long-billed Curlew, Cinnamon Teal, and our first look at Nuttall's Woodpecker on the Auto Tour. The scenery with the mountains as a backdrop was beautiful making each group of ducks or geese taking off or landing an absolutely amazing sight requiring a photo to be taken. Teresa and I couldn't get enough."

Hogan worries that incidents, such as the recent attempt to takeover a NWR in Eastern Oregon by a group of extremists, portend future threats to NWR. She's concerned that the Federal government could abandon NWR with pressure from people with special interests who want to develop the land. Another reason she worries about the continued existence of NWR is because when she visits she sees there is little or no funding. Her message to birders is; visit NWR's and show your support. She guarantees you won't regret it. For those of you who want to find out more about the political situation involving NWR or help NWR here is a good website: http://refugeassociation.org.

THANK YOU By Ralph Cioff

I would like to thank first of all, Jennifer Wilson-Pines and all the Board members, for nominating my Great Egret Award. It was a great and unexpected honor to receive it.

Thanks to all of those friends and chapter members, who came to help make this unexpected presentation, I am so very humbled, amazed and appreciative to have such an honor bestowed upon me, to be thanked for something that I truly loved to do. It was so nice to see all of my specia birding friends again.

I have the pleasure of seeing the framed Great Egret pictures and award hanging opposite my bed, where I can admire them every day. Thank you again Jennifer Wilson-Pines for doing all the groundwork to make this award possible.

Ed Note: Ralph was presented with the Great Egret Award for his over 50 years of dedication to Audubon. It is the highest recgnition given to volunteers by National Audubon.

The text of his award read, "Ralph Cioffi has been an active member of North Shore Audubon for over 50 years. Ralph has served in many positions: President, Conservation Chair, Newsletter Editor, field trip leader and field notes compiler. He worked on many Chapter conservation efforts and wrote the first 30 years of NSAS history. In 1973 he took over the compiling of the Field Notes and continued for 43 years of detailed listings. Ralph's encyclopedic knowledge and ability to ID a bird are renowned on Long Island and beyond. Ralph's dedicated service to Audubon as a volunteer sets a high standard for others to follow.

About that encyclopedic knowledge, some years back when a call went out for suggestion for Long Island Sound Futures Fund grant ideas, one was "Download Ralph Cioffi's brain." Thank You Ralph for your many years of dedication to the chapter and preserving the natural environment of our region...
