Ralph Cioffi's Bird Lists

Ralph Cuioffi left us with an extensive amount of note books with all his bird lists from over the many years that he birded.

Kathy Golder and Shelly Ventresca have volunteered to attempt to transfer them all on to ebird, so that Ralph may be remembered for all his constant vigilance recording the birds he saw.

As of right now, Kathy and Shelly have posthumously opened an ebird account for Ralph and are laboriously transcribing his lists. It is a time consuming task. They are doing a wonderful job.

Thank you to both of them.

President's Message By Jill Vomacka 2023 NSAS Plant Sale was a Huge Success!

I just wanted to thank all our volunteers and staff at the Garvies Point Museum and Preserve that helped unloading plants from the trucks, organizing pre orders, placing preorders around the main traffic circle, assembling plant boxes, informing plant buyers about the native plants they needed for their soil and sun requirements, placing plants for day of sale indoors etc., etc.. All your help allowed the pre sale organization days go smoothly, be less stressful, and required less hours in assembling orders.

I would like to especially thank Veronica Natale Victoria, Garvies Point Museum and Preserve Director for again putting the plant information and pre order brochure together and partnering with us in running the plant sale as our fund raiser. This brochure is so informative on native plants I keep it as part of my resources on native plants.

We had a decent turnout of native plant buyer enthusiasts, in spite of the rain. The sale was held inside on the outer deck. By holding it indoors people were able to look at the plants and signage that offered photographs of the plants in bloom.

A special thanks to the following individuals who weathered the rains for 2 days and survived to talk about it.

We could not have had a successful plant sale without all your help. I, Jill Vomacka, NSAS President, Kathryne Natale, NSAS Vice President and Veronica Natale Victoria, Director of GPPM, thank you all from the bottom of our hearts. To all our plant purchasers, thank you for your support and HAPPY PLANTING!

Birding with the New York Times

Our understanding of birds has been profoundly shaped by the work of everyday people. After all, anyone can step outside and pay attention to an untamed world swooping above.

This summer, we're inviting readers around the world to participate in a science project we are working on with the Cornell Lab of Ornithology. We'll be gathering observations about the birds around us, filling in data gaps and giving researchers a clearer picture of biodiversity in places that birders frequent less.

It's important work. Nearly half of all bird species worldwide are known or suspected to be in decline, and climate change could accelerate this trend. By gathering data like this, you'll help inform decisions about the conservation and study of birds.

You don't need to be an expert or have special equipment. For beginners, we'll provide a series of challenges in the next few weeks aimed at getting you on the path toward contributing scientific data.

If you're an experienced birder, we have a bit more to ask. We would like you to go beyond your usual hot spots to make observations in areas where data is sparse.

The New York Times is working with the Cornell Lab of Ornithology to gather observations from readers about the birds around us. To participate, go the NY Times and search on Help Us Track Birds

The project will run from now to September. Join us at any time, and connect with a global community of readers, scientists and researchers. Share what you've learned. And maybe even discover a new way of seeing nature.

Sign up at the NY Times, Help Us Track Birds The next step is to download Merlin or eBird, birding apps from the Cornell Lab of Ornithology. Click the sentence below that best describes your birding experience, and stay tuned for an email with a complete set of instructions.

Frequently asked questions

2 4 4 5 5 1

What if I'm not sure if I'm a beginner or an experienced birder? If you're new to birding, we strongly encourage you to stick with Merlin for the time being. If you have some experience birding, but are new to eBird, we recommend taking Cornell's eBird Essentials course or at least watching this short video before you start submitting checklists.

How do I participate if I'm new to birding? After you fill out the registration form, look out for an email from birds@nytimes.com over the following days. It'll include the first in a series of challenges designed to build your birding skills. Eventually, you might take on the challenges for more experienced birders listed below. Continued on Page 3

SUMMER WEDNESDAY WALKS

Because our insurance carrier requires a leader for all sponsored walks, we no longer can have leaderless walks. We are working on finding leaders for the summer, but don't have a complete roster yet. It will be a little different than in the past. Each leader will pick a site the weekend before the walk, and it will be posted on our Facebook page and group and our website calendar. Walks will be at 9:30 unless otherwise listed. Cancellations will also be posted on Facebook and the website.

We could use a few more leaders ... contact Barbara or Jennifer if interested.

How do I participate if I have experience birding already? If you haven't already, sign up using the form above. We're counting on you, as part of this project, to help fill in gaps in scientific data that scientists at the Cornell Lab have identified. Be sure to add #NYT in the comments section of your eBird checklist. Focus on these places for submitting eBird checklists:

- Non-recreational open spaces. Is that sidewalk tree a popular spot for house sparrows? Is that wetland behind a nearby Walmart teeming with life? Try there!
- Areas away from roads. Most birding checklists occur close to roads. The farther you can get from them, the better.
- Farms and fields. Rural agricultural areas are some of the least-birded habitats. Submit checklists from public roads adjacent to crop fields, livestock grazing lands and other cultivated areas.
- Areas between eBird "Hotspots." Use the "Explore" tab in the eBird app to find nearby "Hotspots" — shared locations where other birders have submitted observations. Go birding in areas between or far from those Hotspots.
- Areas with few observations of a particular species. What's a common bird species in your area? Look up past reports of that species on the eBird Species Map and zoom in on your city. Then, visit areas without any previous observations of that species, and file a checklist.

Will my observations be submitted to the Cornell Lab of Ornithology's database if I use Merlin Bird ID? The Merlin app is a reference and learning tool. Observations in Merlin do not enter into Cornell's scientific database, eBird. To submit a finding from Merlin to that database, follow the prompts in Merlin to report it in eBird.

Bird-Friendly Habitat Certification

Please consider contacting NSAS at nsaudubonsociety@gmail.com for advice on how to help birds in your yard. If your yard qualifies you get a sign that says Bird-Friendly Habitat Certification. But if you don't earn the sign at first NSAS keeps helping you until your yard qualifies, which involves having a yard with native plants and few invasive non-natives and less lawn.

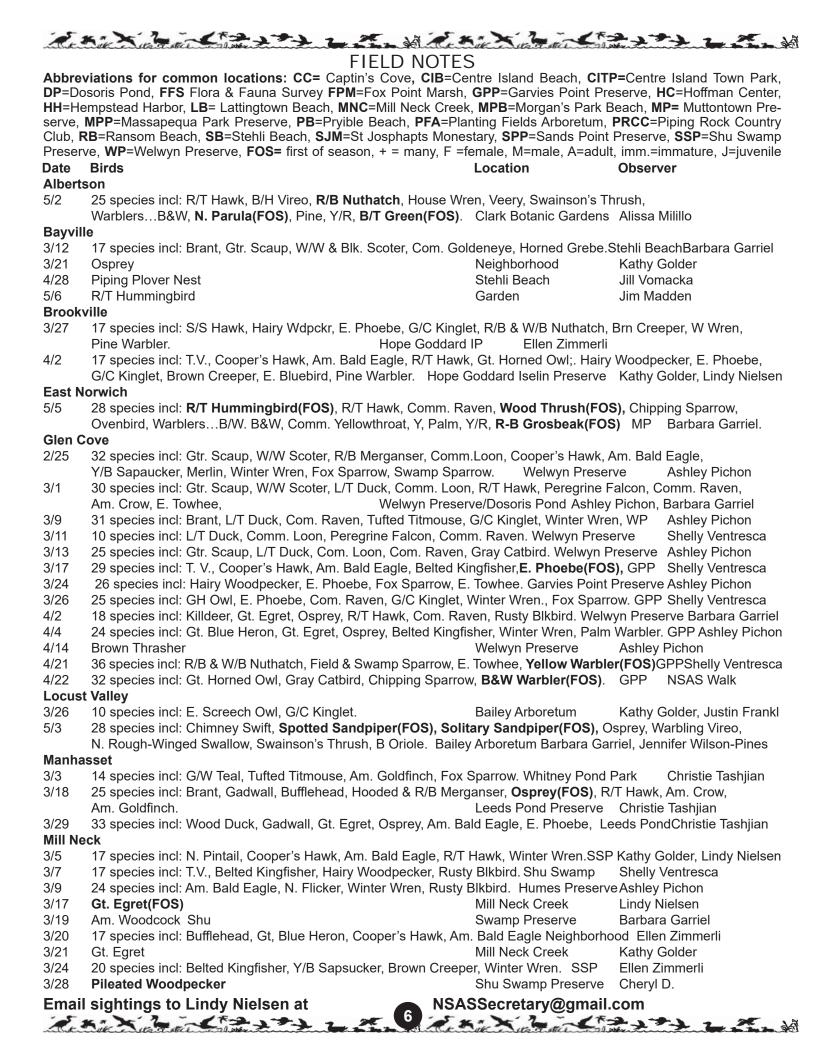

You also get points for composting, using a rain barrel, having a water source for birds and using natural mulch. So please email NSAS soon to set up an appointment for us to visit your yard starting at the end of April. We help you choose native plants and design your yard as well. In the past 6 years we have visited and helped over 100 gardens to become bird-friendly habitats.
